Upland to begin testing for heavy metals in water

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

Following a disclosure that toxic metals were spilled above ground and into a sewer at a Ninth Street industrial park in Upland last month, sampling of well waters will not include analysis of nickel.

The Upland City Council was told Monday that tests made annually for about a dozen metals and minerals the city's seven wells will now include nickel.

Physical and inorganic content is sampled every three years, as required by health and water quality officials, city water and utility director Larry Dilley said.

Tests from the 650-foot deep wells are typically done in early summer, and are designed to establish a base year to compare future water content in case toxic substances do migrate into the city's water system, he said.

The additional nickel test will cost about $15, he estimated. "It's a cheap and effective" detection method, the water director believes.

"Nobody really knows how long it will take to get into the groundwater," if at all, Dilley said. The speed of migration depends on soil type and rainfall.

More exhaustive water sampling was ordered after Garhauer Marine's year-old dispute over a sewer line destroyed by acidic, metallic waste dumping came to the council's attention.

Garhauer polishes stainless steel sailboat parts in acid baths, and apparently dumped some metal-saturated acid down a sewer line. Another occupant of the Ninth Street industrial park independently sampled and tested Garhauer runoff — reportedly a small puddle — and found it highly acidic.

Garhauer owner Bill Felgenhauer said sewer dumping has ceased, and charged the city with selective enforcement.

The closest city well is about 1,000 yards from Garhauer's factory.

Aside from well water testing and manhole sampling, Dilley said he knows of no other attempts to monitor industrial wastes. Upland sewage, commercial and residential, is channeled into the Chino Basin Municipal Water District treatment plants. No industrial line serves Upland.

In the past five year's sampling, the water director said well tests have failed to uncover health hazards or metallic concentrations above allowable limits. The only exception is high nitrate concentration, routinely detected in three city wells. Nitrate is a nitric acid salt whose source the city has yet to pinpoint, but is probably from decomposing citrus grove fertilizer, he said.

The water is still used for drinking by diluting in reservoirs the liquid having high nitrate concentrations with good water from other areas, he said.

Nitrates are believed to be a precursor of the so-called blue baby syndrome, that affects oxygen uptake in blood in infants six months old or less, Dilley said.

All of Upland's 50,220 residents get their drinking and bathing water — using about 300 gallons each daily — from ground water pumped from the sprawling Chino Basin.

Tax counseling will be offered to elderly

Free income tax counseling for people 60 and over will be available beginning in February at various locations throughout the West Valley, through the nationwide Tax-Counseling-for-the Elderly program.

Volunteers receive training under the sponsorship of the Internal Revenue Service and the state Franchise Tax Board which enables counselors to assist with most tax problems encountered by retired or elderly taxpayers, but not with questions arising from ownership of farm or business property.

Those in need of tax advice should request an appointment at the location most convenient to them. Locations in the West Valley are as follows: Social Services Center, 5220 D. St., Chino, 627-7401; Community Center, 5111 Benito, Montclair, 626-8571, extension 250; Neighborhood Center, 9791 Arrow Hwy., Rancho Cucamonga, 987-1618; Upland Public Library, 450 N. Euclid Ave., Upland, 985-0994; Ontario City Library, 215 E. C St., Ontario, 988-8481.

T'ai Chi being taught in Montclair class

A Montclair class in T'ai Chi, a Chinese form of exercise and meditation, isn't what the typical athlete would consider a workout.

T'ai Chi brings inner spiritual understanding to the world of exercise.

Hugh Pendelton, or Swami Prem Sudas, as he is also known, is teaching a six-week class in T'ai Chi at 3:30 p.m. every Thursday at the Community Center.

Pendelton gave a free demonstration of it last week. He considers T'ai Chi "soft exercise, soft martial arts."

Eleven people swayed with him to oriental jazz music.

To explain T'ai Chi's development, he told a story about a Chinese who was sitting outside 5,000 years ago feeling the "essence" of nature.

While watching the clouds roll by, the man was enthralled by chirping birds and the sound of a nearby stream.

He began to sway from side-to-side and a disciple asked what he was doing.

"T'ai Chi Yung," the master replied and the disciple opened a T'ai Chi school.

Pendelton shared his seven years of T'ai Chi experience with the Montclair group and told them to pretend they were suspended from the ceiling on "bungee" cords.

"Stand centered," Pendelton told them. "Not dead center; that's when you're six feet under."

Pendelton demonstrated a set of movements he said began with a "classic karate pose" and said the movements would be martial arts if performed swiftly.

"... But we're doing them slow as a form of meditation. There's already enough self-defense in the world," he said.

A Los Angeles native, Pendelton speaks with a slight British accent he picked up on trips to India.

He attended Hollywood High School and the University of California in Los Angeles, but his interest in T'ai Chi came from a television program.

Pendelton was once a teacher in the Chaffey Adult Education Program, but his class fell prey to Proposition 13. He then taught self-awareness at Chaffey College, but when that school cut one-third of its budget, his class was dropped.

Then he was a physical therapist at the City of Hope in Duarte, but recently changed over to family psychological therapy.

He now uses T'ai Chi in family therapy sessions.

Pendelton, who wore a beaded necklace displaying a picture of Bhagwan Rajneesh, said a book by Al Wong revived his interest in the Chinese meditation form.

"I always said I would do T'ai Chi on the Great Wall," he said proudly. "And I did."

Trustees consider campus video games

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

They're not opposed to having video games on campus, but they insist on a solid plan for supervision of students and protection of property before any games get the green light.

That was the word from trustees for the Chaffey Joint Union High School District when first a parent and then a teacher asked if they could set up video games on high school grounds to raise funds.

"I think this board is willing to look at it, seriously consider it and give it a try," President Ray Sarrio said of the video game proposal. He urged members of the Alta Loma High School Booster Club to work with Principal Ray Rayburn on a suitable location and supervision system for the games.

The parents proposed setting up nine video games in the high school auditorium foyer which would operate during both lunch periods and after school. They would split profits with the owner of the games, and estimate a net income of $125 per week.

Advocates of the video games cited a successful fund-raising program in which a San Jose high school has been using video games since the fall.

The parents suggested that campus proctors could check stickers on campus identification cards to see in which lunch period the students belonged.

Rayburn said campus proctors are too busy to supervise use of the games at lunch in addition to their other duties. He expressed fear that unsupervised students might vandalize or otherwise damage the machines — or surrounding school property.

"I don't think you can monitor anything by just looking through a window," he said. "If somebody isn't right there watching, then I just don't know."

Superintendent Mike Dirksen noted the machines would pose serious liability problems.

"We have to be very, very, very sure that we don't inherit a liability," he told the parents. Damage to the machines might be the Boosters' responsibility, but the school is liable for windows and doors broken if vandals or thieves are attracted by the machines.

Martin Balding, conservation coordinator, said the utility bills would be incidental, as 10 video games would cost about 8 cents per hour to operate. The Boosters planned to operate the machines about 4 hours each day.

Sharon Romero, director of the foreign language club at Ontario High School, said her group is also planning to use video games to raise funds. That group's proposal, she noted, is still being developed.

In other discussion, the board expressed approval for a new attendance incentive plan for district employees.

"There are times ... when the lack of attendance of staff exceeds the lack of attendance of students," Dirksen told the trustees.

So Personnel Director Dean Smothers developed a plan to encourage teachers to come to work on those days when they're debating whether to stay home.

The district, he explained, budgets about $200,000 for substitute teachers each year. He proposed a plan that would return part of that money to high school departments with excellent attendance records.

"What we're looking at is a transfer of funds that are now being used for substitutes," he explained. "I can't guarantee ... but I sincerely believe that it won't cost the district any money."

The program will be on a voluntary basis, he said, and will be held on a trial period this semester.

Under the trial plan, each teacher with perfect attendance will bring a $100 annual bonus to his or her department for educational expenses. One absence will bring a $50 bonus, and two absences will bring a $25 bonus.

In addition, a department would receive $30 for each member if all teachers in that department have perfect attendance, $20 per member if the absences average one day per teacher and $10 if the absences average two days per teacher.

The funds will be used for instruction and supplies, at each department's discretion.

Trustee Curtiss Bonneville Jr. said this plan could cost more money than anticipated if only those with above average attendance records choose to participate. If the district must pay bonuses to those who already come to work in addition to hiring substitute teachers for those who stay home, the program could cost the district money, he noted.

BPW sets meeting

"Goal Setting for 1983" will be the topic of the Foothill-Valley Business and Professional Women's Club at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Pacific Federal Savings and Loan, 1 S. Euclid Ave., Ontario.

The Rev. Lolita Hughes, guest speaker, will discuss setting and achieving goals. A graduate of the United Church of Religious Science School of Ministry, she is starting a church in Chino.

Reservations are not necessary for the meeting, but for more information, call Linda Yao (days) at 981-1033 or Margene Chrisman at 984-4806.

In other discussion, the superintendent said county counsel has advised the district to continue collecting its extra-curricular activity fee despite a ruling by an appellate court last fall that such a fee is unconstitutional.

Until the state Supreme Court rules for or against the appellate court decision, he said, the Santa Barbara case has no direct impact on the Chaffey district.

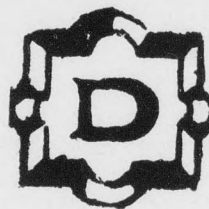

Dirksen noted that this district is the only one in San Bernardino County with a fee comparable to the one outlawed in a ruling against the Santa Barbara school district.

Supervisors chip in for Foothill Freeway study

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

SAN BERNARDINO — The Board of Supervisors approved an agreement Monday for the county to pay $20,000 to help finance a study aimed at making the Foothill Freeway a reality.

San Bernardino County is one of a dozen agencies being asked to pay a share of the $180,000 study by a team of consultants to include long-term financing of the freeway extension and preliminary engineering.

Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quade and Douglas Inc., with offices in Orange County, is the lead consulting firm. Other consultants on the project are Robert J. Harmon and Associates, a firm based in Washington, D.C.; Arthur Bauer and Associates in Sacramento and Al Hollinden, professor of transportation studies at the University of California, Riverside, and former chairman of the Orange County Transportation Commission.

Wes McDaniel, executive director of San Bernardino Associated Governments (SANBAG), said this morning that the study has received funding commitments from at least seven governmental entities. The Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association has also pledged $20,000, he added.

He noted that the formula for cost sharing was based on community population and on the length and width of the freeway extension through the communities.

The breakdown on funding is: San Bernardino County, $20,000; SANBAG, $20,000; Fontana, $10,000; Rialto, $10,000; Upland, $15,000; Rancho Cucamonga, $20,000; city of San Bernardino, $15,000; Los Angeles County Transportation Commission, $15,000; Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, $10,000; Claremont, $7,500, and La Verne, $7,500.

McDaniel said no action has been taken yet by Fontana, La Verne, the city of San Bernardino or the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors. He added that the local agencies have not yet approached the California Transportation Commission on getting $10,000 from it as the state's share.

However, he said the funding plan has so far encountered no major problems.

Minister to start school in Australia

Musician-clergyman-teacher David Johnston, 39, Upland, will leave Wednesday for Sydney, Australia, to establish an International School of the Arts and Evangelism.

He is taking with him his wife, Marianna, sons Dietrich, 11, and Noel, 10, and daughter, Melissa, 4.

His school, he explained, will be a ministry training for spreading the gospel through the arts into Southeast Asia.

"I have a heartbeat for Southeast Asia," Rev. Johnston added. "It has 66 percent of the world's population, in so few countries. Red China alone has 25 percent of the population of the world."

"There are millions and millions of people who've never heard the gospel."

Rev. Johnston was ordained in Pomona in 1974. Currently, he is full-time minister of music at New Life Community Church in Claremont. He has been with the church 10 years.

With an evangelistic team from his church called the Red Letter Edition, he toured Australia in 1980 and again in 1982. Team members sing, play instruments, present dramas and dance. They're also trained in Bible to be evangelists. In addition to Australia, they've performed throughout the United States, in Canada, Mexico City and Great Britain.

While they were in Sydney, they were hosted by the Christian Life Center. The center rents facilities a block away in which Johnston's school will be based.

Rev. Johnston is from Compton. He has a bachelor of science degree from Cal State Los Angeles, a master of music degree from the University of the Pacific Conservatory and a performance diploma in violin from Salzburg, Austria.

He has done doctoral studies at USC in the performing arts, has performed professionally on the violin and was concert master of the International Festival Orchestra in Salzburg in 1969.

"For as long as I can remember, I've seen the value of performing arts in communication. Being a minister, I have a divine calling on my life to communicate the gospel."

"I want to combine gospel with a school like Juilliard. A student can come to this school and develop skills on instruments or voice or in the dramatic arts to a high degree of excellence and use that as a tool in communicating the gospel," Rev. Johnston said.

In countries all over the world, there are no cultural barriers to music, drama or dance, he noted.

"Red China is wide open to the arts. I want to bring the gospel through the arts to this country through this school."

Rev. Johnston said he envisions his school linked with the Christian Life Center in Sydney.

"They emphasize creative ministries and they emphasize missions. Everyone is involved. The school will be under the auspices of this church" which is 4½ years old.

"I will be able to be fulfilled in my life. The people are there. They are receptive. My goal is to put on a major project like an Easter program in the Sydney Opera House," he said.

He said for students to be accepted they would have to "have direction. It is a specialized school. It really isn't a Christian-workers type institution."

"A student must be someone with a high degree of proficiency in talent and a definite calling of God in his life. Students will pay tuition," he said.

Rev. Johnston has been planning one year to make this move. Others in the Claremont congregation are planning to join him at the center sometime in the future, he said.

Rev. Johnston taught seven years at Bakersfield College. He conducted the symphony orchestra there and taught music history, musicology, theory, appreciation and all strings.

On Mondays, his day off at the church, he taught at Biola College and last year at Pomona College he coached the violins.

He has only one fear in going to Australia to live, Rev. Johnston said, and that is driving on the left side of the street.

Cal Poly to be hard hit by state budget

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

The 1983-84 proposed state budget would eliminate funding for the summer quarter at California State University campuses, and California State Polytechnic University, Pomona would be hit especially hard.

Four of the 19 CSU campuses offer summer quarters, and the governor's staff estimated the savings would total about $13.6 million. CSU budget planning staff is estimating the savings would be notably lower, spokesman Boyd Horn said today.

At Cal Poly, the loss of summer quarter will mean students in the popular high-technology programs will have to wait longer to graduate, so fewer new students will be admitted to the university, and consequently the university's state funding would be substantially reduced, officials say.

"The loss of summer quarter will have a very severe impact on this university," Ken Anderson, dean of planning, said. "We will have to deny access to the campus to more students."

Anderson said that students in the computer science, engineering and business administration majors probably will not graduate on schedule without a summer quarter. Most need a summer quarter to take classes that were full during the academic year.

A self-supporting summer quarter would cost students about $600, Anderson estimated, more than they pay in fees for the entire year.

If the governor or the Legislature does not reverse the decision to eliminate the summer quarter by February, a self-supporting summer quarter will be the university's only option, Anderson said. Administrators must have several months to plan for each quarter's schedule and registration, he said.

Cal Poly and CSU officials are lobbying against the proposed summer quarter elimination, and they know they have to work fast. "If we don't have a definite answer by March 1, we would not be able to put on an effective summer quarter."

If students cannot take courses in summer quarter, they may have to wait as long as a year to get classes they need. This delays their graduation, which in turn delays admittance of new students into these high-demand programs, Anderson said.

Students are already being turned away from these and other popular Cal Poly study programs. The loss of summer quarter will mean more perspective students must be sent away for lack of space.

About 5,550 students (from all majors) were expected to attend the 1983 summer quarter. That translates into about 9 percent loss of the university's total annual "full-time equivalent" enrollment, and a consequent 9 percent cut in state funding for 1983-84.

"That's much more severe than at any other campus," Anderson noted. A 9 percent loss in the annual budget would be in addition to the loss of funding for merit salary increases and upgraded high-technology services and equipment, plus cutbacks in library staffing, legal services and computer services.

Those cutbacks are expected to save the state $137 million for 1983-84.

Anderson said his staff cannot be certain how a $230 hike in the annual fees each student must pay will affect enrollment. While the recent $44 hike is expected to have a minor impact on enrollment, a $230 hike has a greater potential for substantial impact.

"The $230 fee will make some students say, 'I'd like to, but I can't,'" Anderson said. "As we informally talk to students, they are telling us it's much more difficult to come up with the money to buy books and pay the fees."

Valley cities oppose budget proposal

If Gov. George Deukmejian's proposed cuts in state aid to cities are approved by the Legislature, the 10 valley cities stand to lose $1.1 million this fiscal year, said Hal Stemmler, media director for the League of California Cities.

"This puts most of the cities in a situation of reverse bailout and is unacceptable," he added.

"This is money already budgeted and, in some cases, already spent. To have it cut now causes chaos for cities."

"What we in the League want is legislative guarantees against this."

Stemmler said the League will fight the cuts. "We will follow the strategy we used last June in Sacramento, stressing that in no case should the state balance its budget at the expense of the cities.

"Reverse bailout should not be allowed or the cities will have worse problems than the state."

"Right now, we have taken a temporary wait-and-see stance. We are watching to see how seriously the Legislature takes the governor's proposal."

"If it appears to us that the legislators are taking the proposal seriously, we will ask each city to contact its legislators in Sacramento and protest."

Stemmler said it is impossible to estimate "with any degree of accuracy" what amounts cities would lose under Deukmejian's proposal to take the second half of the state's deficit from 1983-84 allocations.

By June, the state is anticipating a $1.5 billion deficit.

But, Stemmler said, there is a high degree of accuracy in the League's estimates of losses to cities if the $54 million talked about by Deukmejian is trimmed from state aid to cities between February and June.

By city, Stemmler estimates these losses would occur by June if the Legislature approves Deukmejian's proposal:

- Rancho Cucamonga: $252,000.
- Ontario: $241,000.
- Chino: $136,000.
- Claremont: $110,611.
- San Dimas: $110,050.
- Pomona: $75,628.
- Montclair: $66,500.
- Walnut: $54,370.
- Upland: $34,000.
- La Verne: $20,041.

3 new laws benefit handicapped drivers

Three new laws will make life a little easier for handicapped drivers when they take to the road, according to the California Department of Motor Vehicles.

The laws direct certain gas stations to provide refueling service for handicapped drivers, increase penalties for unlawfully parking in space designated for the handicapped, permit disabled drivers from other states the same parking privileges as handicapped California drivers, and generally tighten up laws against use by other than disabled persons of the blue handicapped parking placard. They also establish counterfeiting and other manipulations of such placards as a misdemeanor.

California's disabled parking law allows holders of handicapped license plates or holders of the blue California placard to park anywhere general parking is allowed and to park without time limitation and without paying a parking meter.

Herbal treatments are proven today

Many ancient Chinese herbal treatments of illnesses have proven Western scientific bases, according to a Claremont couple who blend Eastern and Western educational backgrounds.

Henry Sheng, a professor of chemical engineering at Cal Poly Pomona, and his wife, Sue H. Chao Sheng, trained as an herbal doctor in the People's Republic of China, are offering a course in Chinese Herbal and Preventive Medicine at the Pomona university.

In China, modern Western physicians and traditional herbal doctors are just now starting to work together providing preventative medicine and health care to the people, according to Mrs. Sheng who has just returned from Hong Kong.

"For the past 10 years, new research centers in major Chinese centers have started combining modern and ancient methods," Mrs. Sheng said.

However, the Shengs explained, modern medicine is available only in the larger cities. The 80 percent of the people who live in small villages and farms still rely on the herbal doctors for their medical care.

Americans, too, are realizing the importance of nutrition, natural substances and exercise in maintaining healthy bodies, Sheng noted.

"As a scientist, I have become convinced of the value of herbal treatments because of proven scientific findings," Sheng said. "But, like most people educated in the West, the values had to be proven to me."

Both Sheng and his wife were born in Shanghai, but he came to this country many years ago as a student. He is a graduate of the University of Maine, with a master's degree from Purdue University and a doctorate from the University of Oklahoma.

Mrs. Sheng came to the United States in 1978. She was educated in Shanghai and spent six years training as an herbal doctor with one of China's most-respected herbal doctors.

The history of herbal medicine is as old as the Chinese culture. Ancient medical books still are studied by modern doctors.

The oldest medical textbooks in the world were published in China during the Han Dynasty from 206 B.C. to 219 A.D. Two of the books still are used today as standard texts, Mrs. Sheng said.

The Chinese began a diagnostic technique by palpitation of the pulse by 420 A.D. and the first Chinese medical academy was established in 510 A.D.

"The Chinese look at the entire body and the relationship between the organs to diagnose an illness," Sheng explained.

"We know that emotions are affected by the internal organs.

"In addition, the Chinese feel health is affected by the seasons and by the body's balance."

The use of many traditional herbs has been handed down over the centuries. Herbs were used in the maintenance of a healthy body and the curing of illness "because they had proven successful," Sheng added.

Now, modern scientific research has discovered that some of the drugs which are used in society actually have been contained in the natural herbs.

As an example, ginseng has been used at least 2,000 years as a heart stimulant. It was put into drinks to help "increase the flow of vital energy in the body."

Now, Sheng stated, ginseng has been chemically proven effective as a stimulant.

Over the centuries, the Chinese have used a green mold grown on ham under special conditions to treat infections.

"Now, we realize that we'd produced penicillin," the professor said.

People in the Orient are encouraged to eat pears in the fall and winter to combat spring allergies. Pears, scientists now know, contain pentathionic acid which is produced synthetically to treat allergies.

The blossoms of chrysanthemums are made into a tea which cleanses the body and helps the eyes, and the mum seeds also are used in a tea to strengthen the body.

"The Chinese feel that people should eat foods in season," Sheng said. "Over the centuries, nature has provided the nutrition needed in each season. We tend to confuse the body by eating foods out of season.

"Watermelon, for example, ripens when it's hot and our bodies need the extra fluid and nutrients in the melon."

Chinese herbal medicine treats the body as a whole. Fear affects the bladder and kidneys and a lung illness will affect the sense of smell and increase grief reactions in a person, the Shengs noted.

The Cal Poly class stresses basic principals and self-diagnostic techniques of traditional herbal approaches to preventing diseases.

Camp Fire sales raise funds for fun

Camp Fire members in the Mt. San Antonio Council are earning money for their clubs and council and gaining first-hand business experience by selling World's Finest Chocolate-Almond bars and Brown & Haley's Almond Roca and Mint Patties to neighbors and friends.

The sale began Friday and continues through Feb. 14.

Each Camp Fire club retains a percentage of the money collected for the candy. Proceeds help keep the council functioning as a chartered member of Camp Fire Inc., a national youth-serving, not-for-profit organization.

Camp Fire members participating in the sale may be identified by a Camp Fire sale pin and by their red, white and blue uniforms. Young Camp Fire Blue Birds will be accompanied by older Camp Fire members or adults.

In addition to earning money for their council and for special projects and trips for their clubs, the young people are gaining business experience as they learn to maintain a positive attitude, keep accurate records and handle money. Camp Fire members also may work to achieve individual incentives such as a week at their resident camp, Nawakwa, in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Mt. San Antonio Camp Fire Council is a member agency of the West End United Way and Los Angeles United Way.

County moves toward purchasing water firm

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

SAN BERNARDINO — The county Board of Supervisors approved a preliminary agreement Monday toward purchase of the Pomona Valley Water Co. for $7,850,000 to serve the Chino Hills.

Pomona Valley is a subsidiary of Park Water Co. The preliminary agreement with county Waterworks District No. 8 hinges on the formation of a non-profit corporation and the sale of bonds by May 2 to finance the purchase.

Supervisors approved the agreement as a routine item without discussion.

Just last week the board passed a resolution of necessity to condemn the assets of Pomona Valley Water Co.

Mike Walker, West Valley regional manager for the county, said at the time that negotiations were continuing and a court battle could be avoided.

"Our basic reason for acquiring the water company is to allow development to occur. It's a private water company. PUC (state Public Utilities Commission) regulations limit its ability to expand such that a public agency must own it in order for the hills to develop properly," Walker said.

The Chino Hills specific plan foresees development of about 30,000 dwellings, requiring an expansion of the water system costing more than $55 million.

The PUC limits indebtedness of the private water company to 25 percent of the company's value, or about $2 million in Pomona Valley's case.

Included in the agreement are stock transfer, assumption of outstanding contracts, resolution of a dispute between the water company and the county over an alleged tax delinquency, eventual approval of the sale by the PUC and desk space from the water company for the sewer superintendent of County Service Area 70-Q.

About 100 dealers will show their collections at the event, and admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

That evening a banquet marking the organization's fourth year anniversary will feature Jane Withers, "Josephine the Plumber," who has the largest doll collection in the world — nine warehouses full. She hopes someday to open a museum as a fund-raising to help the elderly.

'Rome' film will be shown

"Rome" will be the film to be presented Friday by Clay Francisco as the third presentation of the Claremont Travel Film Series' 29 season.

The film, to be shown at 2 and 8 p.m. in Garrison Theater in Claremont, shows the Eternal City, which was not built in a day but in centuries. "Romans, past and present, have been both saints and sinners, poets and Popes, Romeos and rascals," Francisco said in an advance notice of the film.

Opening with views of the forum, the Pantheon and the Colosseum viewed as silhouettes in the morning mist, the film will depict 27 centuries of Roman life.

Other views to be featured include the Arch of Constantine, the Trajan Column, the latter-day Victor Emmanuel Monument, Piazza di Venezia where six major streets converge, the fruit and vegetable market at Campo de' Fiori, the flea market at Porta Portese and fountain at Trevi.

Continuing on to the Spanish Steps on the Piazza di Spagna, the arm-chair travelers will see a rose show, an art show, the shops on Via Veneto, the summertime opera season at the famed Baths of Caracalla, a park, palaces, churches and the Alban Hills before bidding "Arrivederci, Roma."

Single admission tickets are available for the afternoon performance and may be purchased at the box office at 1:15 p.m. that day.

Self-Hypnosis class offered

Dr. William Lombardo will teach a non-credit course entitled "Introduction to Self-Hypnosis" offered by the Office of Continuing Education at Cal Poly University, Pomona. The course provides an introduction to the basic principles, techniques, and applications of auto-suggestion and self-hypnosis and aims at using self-hypnosis to increase study habits and self-confidence, as well as controlling weight and stopping smoking. The class meets in Cal Poly, Building 8, Room 149, Monday evenings, beginning Jan. 24. For information, call 598-4391.

Few things can match the Grand Canyon

By EVELYN KIERAN
Copley News Service

In the ancient world, there were seven mighty wonders. The number has perhaps trebled since that first list was compiled, but it is doubtful if any one of them begins to equal in beauty, grandeur, infinite variety of changing light and mood as the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

The Indians whose ancestors first made themselves at home in the area thousands of years ago have many fables and legends to account for the Canyon. And since today's scientists have yet to agree on a more physically logical explanation for the formation of the magnificently sculptured miles along the Colorado River, the legends continue to be told — and retold.

In the museum at the canyon, where splendid exhibits try to orient the visitor to the vast miracle, wondrous displays attempt to tell the stories that time — and the river — have given us.

You can stand, gazing out the huge picture windows, identifying, as modern man has done, the various formations and streams and riverbeds; you can hike down into the canyon in many places and you can float down the river for days without end.

But the greatest thrill of all is to fly into the canyon from the western end, riding the currents, veering slightly into the curves and crescents, concentrating mightily on the changes in color, the rise and fall of the mesas, the sheer majesty of the pinnacles, the pure gradations of glory.

It is an experience to savor — every second of it — to file in memory for review whenever the everyday world is too much with you.

Poets have praised it; symphonies scored it; reams of writers have tried to put it into words. And all have succeeded in a measure. But none can translate it better than you can yourself.

It should be required study for every American.

But Grand Canyon is not an easy place to reach. It is many, many miles from the nearest towns of any size — and wind and weather often make it an uncomfortable trip as well as a long one.

Wings to the rescue. In a relatively small plane (we flew with Executive Air Service Inc. in a Piper Navajo) you can leave San Diego, fly over the intervening mountains and desert and be at the canyon in two hours.

You then can fly into the canyon itself, exploring, enjoying it all for another hour, land at the comfortable airport, board a bus and tour the South Rim (with time for an excellent lunch) and return to San Diego by sunset. Spectacular!

No long, hot drive, no endless hours of desert freeway and bonus vistas impossible to enjoy on foot from within the canyon itself.

Don Lopez de Cardenas, captain in Coronado's expedition in 1540, would be stupefied to see as many as 50 planes flying within the canyon on a good day. He would think them strange buzzards, perhaps, and wonder what prey they might find in that wondrous place. Unfortunately, little has been recorded of his reactions when he first came upon the canyon.

Grand Canyon, about 277 miles along the east-west course of the Colorado River, is cut into a low, rounded mountain, the Kaibab Plateau. It is today about 18 miles wide, with an average depth of a mile. Scientists estimate that it has taken 3 to 6 million years to cut the Grand Canyon.

And the erosion continues. Only a few weeks ago, there was a great roar, and huge clouds of red dust floated in the air for hours as another great segment of layers and layers of rock, mud and gravel slid down the side of a pinnacle to form yet another new shape on the canyon floor.

Everyone rushed to observe the phenomenon; no one is too blasé to ignore it. And perhaps that explains the real magic of Grand Canyon. There is, within the 1,900 square miles such a feeling of power, of nature at its awesome best, of the ever-changing tempo of the world around us, that mere humans diminish in importance and resume their proper proportions in the order of the universe.

Mere humans have, however, made it possible to enjoy the miracle. The Canyon was made a national monument in 1908 and a national park in 1919. As such, it is protected from all the nastier inroads of civilization while providing comfortable facilities for visitors.

There are half a dozen hotels and motels on the South Rim, many right on the edge of the canyon; adequate food centers for lunch and dinner and gift shops filled with souvenirs from the many Indian tribes who still live in the region.

You easily could spend weeks exploring the Canyon. The Park Service has literally carved trails out of the inner walls of the Canyon. Mule trips of one or two days are offered for those wishing a really intimate glimpse of the wonders of the area and raft trips from a few hours to a few weeks, starting at the eastern end of the canyon, are bookable through several tour operators licensed to operate in the park.

Arsonist setting bikes afire

Pomona fire officials are seeking an arsonist who has set fire to 15 expensive motorcycles during the past two months.

Fire Capt. Kelly Pyle Jr. warns residents to put their motorcycles in garages or otherwise protect them from the arsonist, who usually strikes during the early morning hours.

Pyle said these fires have occurred in an area bounded by Holt Boulevard and Kingsley Avenue and Indian Hill Boulevard and Garey Avenue.

The bikes are usually on the street or in a driveway, where they can be reached readily. The arsonist — or arsonists — usually cuts the fuel line and turns on a valve. Once the fire is ignited, it is fed by the bike's own fuel.

"The bikes are usually set on fire about 6:30 a.m.," Pyle said.

Arrest of the arsonist could lead to a three-year prison term on each count, Pyle said.

Persons having information or who have observed anything suspicious are asked to call investigators at 620-2218.

Master gardener

Dear Master Gardener:

Q: Why is the green fruit on my naval orange tree splitting?

A: Splitting does not seem to occur from a single factor. Experiments have been done under different conditions studying irrigation practices, fertilizer applications or other cultural practices and they show no difference in the amount of splitting. Studies indicate that changes in temperature and humidity may have more effect on fruit splitting in naval oranges than anything else.

Q: I should like to plant some strawberries this year. How should they be planted and when is the best time to plant them?

A: In this area strawberries should be planted around mid-November. Work your soil to a depth of 8 to 10 inches. Set the plants 12 to 14 inches apart in single rows on top of beds that are 5 to 6 inches high and 5 to 6 inches wide on top. Space the beds at least 28 inches apart and allow 28 inches between rows.

Open a v-shaped hole with a trowel. Insert the roots, spreading them out in a fan shape and cover the hole with soil, firming it carefully around the roots. The upper part of the crown should be slightly above or level with the surface of the ground. Irrigate immediately to settle the soil.

Q: I live in an apartment and have to confine my gardening to containers. I grew tomatoes and bush cucumbers this summer. What can I plant now?

A: There are a number of cool-season vegetables that can be successfully grown in containers. They should be fed regularly with a complete fertilizer or you can use a controlled release fertilizer that provides nutrients for the entire growing season in one application.

Beets can be grown in a plant box with 12 inches of soil. Sow seeds 3 inches apart at monthly intervals. Carrots can be grown in any container 12 to 15 inches deep.

You might try planting miniatures or short varieties. Plant every two weeks, keeping soil moist until leafy tops appear. The curly kales provide decorative container plants. Sow seeds directly into soil.

To encourage continuous growth, harvest outside leaves. Leaf lettuce is easy to grow and attractive in wood planter boxes or large pots. Sow seeds or set out transplants and water regularly. You need only 8 inches of soil for radishes, and you might plant them along with carrots, lettuce or beets at two-week intervals.

Problems with your plants? Send your gardening questions to UC Master Gardeners, Cooperative Extension, 21150 Box Springs Road, Riverside, Ca 92507. It is impossible to respond individually to letters, but the most common questions will be answered in this column.
